Cystic Fibrosis (Caucasian) Yes

Sickle Cell (African American) _____

Thalassemia (Greek/Italian) _____

Tay-Sach's (Jewish) _____

If yes to any of the above, were you determined a carrier? No

How would you describe your personality and temperament? Friendly, Passive-Aggressive, Imaginative, and sort of Sassy. I am outgoing and enjoy the company of people but I also love to be with myself.

What is your philosophy of life? Live well; Try to make myself and those that I love happy.

What qualities and characteristics would you hope the recipient parents possess? Intelligence, Integrity, A desire to pick up a book or go outside, And some scattered dignity here and there. Ooh! And a sense of humor!

How does it make you feel at the possibility of their offspring knowing about the donation? Kind of excited and kind of apprehensive. On the one hand, it's good to know where you come from. On the other, I know a girl who is the (beautiful) result of a donation who knows she was from a donation and seems to look for her father in every man she meets. I believe it's up to the parents to decide whether or not to tell the child.

How would you describe your childhood? It was a good childhood in general. It was a little rocky in parts because of my parent's divorce and learning to adapt to new families. But looking back, I'd say I had coped rather well. I was well-loved and active . I've been drawing for as long as I can remember. I was also precocious, saying anything and everything on my mind, and now that I watch my kid sister is growing up, I'm noticing the same thing in her.

What is the earliest memory you hold as a child? When I was maybe two or three years old, my kitten Scooter fell into the bathtub while I was in there and I thought that it was so funny. Then I was worried because the water seemed to hurt her because she didn't like it and ran away. Of course, she was fine.

What was it like growing up in your family?

It was alright. Because of the marriages and divorces, I had the opportunity to be the youngest, oldest, middle, and only child in the family. I was a good kid, and on my dad's side, I had a step-sister who caused a lot more of a splash than I did. No matter what little trouble I got into, it couldn't be worse than my sister. Between her and the new baby sister, I slid under the radar a lot. As a result, my Dad didn't coddle me, but supported me from a distance. I learned how to take care of myself, though if I ever needed anything, all I had to do was ask. He taught me that it's best to get things for myself, so I always earned my own money for things. On my Mom's side, I had two step-sisters who could do no wrong in my stepfather's eyes. According to him, I wasn't worth much compared to his daughters, so anything I did was never good enough. It seems weird now, but I think the reason I worked so hard and got on the honor roll was just to rub it in his face. The sisters themselves were never mean to me. And my Mom is, and always was, my hero.

What religion did you belong to as a child? None, really. Neither side of my family are really religious. I became curious at around sixth grade and ended up going on my own to a Lutheran church. Then Methodist. Then Presbyterian. Then Unitarian. Then Wiccan-Unitarian. Then Wiccan. Then Buddhist. Then around freshman year in high school I gave up and got a different hobby which was more fulfilling, less confusing, and didn't require bumming rides.

When I Was A Child:

My favorite thing to do was: Draw, explore, and play with friends.

At home I was expected to: Clean up after myself, do the assigned chores, get my homework done, and play without destroying anything.

My parents were strict about: Nothing, really. As long as I took care of my responsibilities and was polite, I was good. But I was never inclined to ignore my responsibilities or be rude. Or if I did, I was never busted.

My parents taught me to value: Myself and my family.

What I loved most about my father was: That he always knew the answers, and was nice to everyone.

What I loved most about my mother was: Her independence and her ability to speak her mind. That she never seemed to need anyone but me. And, if dad didn't happen to have an answer, she did.

My favorite relatives were: My Uncle Tom and Uncle Nugget (I still don't know his real name). They spoiled me silly and taught me how to belch on command. And they always had kittens around!

I loved to visit: The Horses.

In comparison to others I was: Self-reliant. I played well with others, but if there weren't others around I was okay with that, too.

Your Teenage Years:

Describe yourself as a teenager: Headstrong, but quiet unless I was on stage. I liked time to myself to read and draw. I knew what I wanted, and I got it (even if what I wanted was subject to change every other month). I've always filled the role as the honest one and the problem solver in my group of friends.

Describe your achievements: I graduated college with a 3.6 GPA, I underwent a two year apprenticeship to learn tattooing, and I'm good at it. I'd say earning a living doing what you really love is the biggest achievement one can ask for.

Did you do poorly at anything? Math. And not too poorly. Maybe C average.

Did you have any problems as a teenager (e.g., health, acne, social, educational, etc.)? Nope.

What do you hope to achieve by volunteering in an egg donor program? (e.g., emotionally, financially): I'd like to affect people's lives. I will not lie; the financial compensation helped the decision as well. But I'd like to know that I've made someone I don't know happy and given them a family that they couldn't have otherwise. Also, the idea of spreading my genes without having to reproduce is intriguing

What message would you like passed on to the recipient of your eggs/their offspring? Do Well with your child.

What helped you decide to become an egg donor? Same as above.

Do you consider yourself a reliable person? Yes.

Do you consider yourself a punctual person? Yes.

Would you describe yourself as a religious or spiritual person? No. Unless being optimistic counts.

Do you have any ethical, moral or religious reservations about being an egg donor? No.

What are your personal goals? Have you achieved any of these goals? I want to be able to support myself without help. I would also like to make myself and those I love happy. I would say that I've made it on the first and the second is an ever-changing thing that may never be fulfilled but I keep up maintenance on.

What do you see yourself doing in the next 5-10 years? Tattooing and traveling around the world.

What would you like your recipient couple to know about you that has not already been asked? Art runs in my whole family on my dad's side. Great-Grandma used to paint still-life's, Grandpa carves, Grandma paints china, Dad does impressionist landscapes, and myself and my half-sister draw whatever we see. I'd like to know that if the child is more artistically inclined, you won't beat the art out of him/her in favor of having a sporty child. Also, as a warning, I've always liked to travel and explore. I don't know if that's genetic, but it did get me into trouble as a kid. Always wandering off.

What is your favorite color? To be quicker; I'm not fond of pink. I love the rest!

Favorite type of food? Japanese., Italian, Mexican... Variety...

Favorite movie? Boondock Saints, The Producers, Princess Mononoke, Phantom of the Opera, the Big Lebowski... it depends on the day.

Favorite type of music? Anything with a beat.

Favorite Book? Wizards First Rule, Harry Potter, Cryptonomicon, Fables.

Would you be willing to donate to gay or single prospective parents? Yes. Please specify: : If they believe that they would be good parents; more power to them! Wait... that's how I feel about straight couples, too.

Would you be willing to meet a child conceived as the result of your donation? Yes Please elaborate: If any conceived child would want to meet me, I'd be interested to see how my pseudo-spawn turned out.

Would you be interested in possibly meeting the prospective parents? Sure Thing.

What are your beliefs concerning selective reduction or aborting a fetus due to an anomaly(s) (birth defect)?

Certainly not Nazi beliefs. No blond-haired, blue-eyed children only crap. If the birth defect were going to make it impossible to have an enjoyable life, if the child would have to fight to breath or move, or would stand out negatively in society in such a way that life-long ostracism and misery could be the only result, then yes; I can understand how a parent (who's decision it is anyway) would want to abort the child.

How do you feel about the possibility of any remaining embryos being donated to another infertile couple that cannot afford the cost of infertility treatment? Will you sign a consent permitting such donation? Okay. Waste not, want not.

How do you feel about any remaining embryos being discarded or donated to scientific research? Will you sign a consent permitting such medical or scientific research?

I'd prefer scientific research over them being discarded.

Some clinics have their Prospective Parents sign away rights to any left over embryos to be used at the clinic's discretion, how do you feel about not knowing the outcome of their decision?

They only way that I would feel odd would be if they were used for another couple. In the long run, it doesn't really matter, but I would like to keep track of how much of me is running around out there. But scientific research? No problems (I'm assuming this means stem cell research and not breeding an army of rat-people for our president or something).

What are your thoughts on the possibility of this couple using a gestational carrier (surrogate) or a qualified sperm donor?

That might be interesting. Build your own baby. Genetics are neat!

Is there a message you would like to leave for your prospective parents? Do a good job!
