If yes to any of the above, were you determined a carrier? _____

How would you describe your personality and temperament? Fairly level-headed temperament, with a bubbly, slightly spunky personality who knows how to have fun but can be serious if the situation arises.

What is your philosophy of life? You've only got one chance so give it your all. Accomplish all you can in the time given and give all the love you have because when you're gone it's gone too, no need to keep it locked up, everyone deserves love.

What qualities and characteristics would you hope the recipient parents possess? Those similar to what my parents possess; unconditional love for their children, a respect for life to the fullest and a hope for the greatest achievements possible by their children.

How does it make you feel at the possibility of their offspring knowing about the donation? Confident, their children knowing that their parents wanted them so badly that they were willing to pay to have someone else's eggs and possibly sperm to create their life I think should only show the child that they were truly longed for.

How would you describe your childhood? Full. My life has been no fairytale but it has certainly taught me a lot. I was my parents' youngest child until my older sister had her first child at 15 and my parents raised my niece. After that they started foster care so there was rarely a second I was the baby but I loved my childhood. It was full of life and adventure.

What is the earliest memory you hold as a child? Reaching into my memory it has to be of my father and I in the front yard of our old house and him throwing me into the air and catching me. I was in my favorite purple dress and we were getting ready to go out somewhere.

What was it like growing up in your family? As I stated above it was an adventure. There were always children running around and always a new adventure to face. Thankfully my family is strong and supportive so we've always made it through whatever came our way.

What religion did you belong to as a child? We were non-denominational Christian, I still am to this day.

When I Was A Child:

My favorite thing to do was: to sing and dance for my family.

At home I was expected to: help around the house with age appropriate chores and with the children.

My parents were strict about: the types of TV shows I could watch.

My parents taught me to value: life, love and family.

What I loved most about my father was: how he always understood me and knew how to comfort me, I'm definitely a Daddy's girl.

What I loved most about my mother was: her caring heart, she is a much bigger person than I am taking care of so many children.

My favorite relatives were: my grandparents, on both sides. They were incredibly different but amazing.

I loved to visit: my Aunt Melanie. She had the children closest to my age and she would cut my hair.

In comparison to others I was: very outgoing and caring about others, I made friends with everyone just to include them.

Your Teenage Years:

Describe yourself as a teenager: I definitely had my teenager moments, but I would say I was well behaved. I was self-motivated when it came to school and activities. I was highly involved in extracurricular activities and my church.

Describe your achievements: I would say my greatest achievements were personal, although I had many achievements in school and in my extracurricular activities. I think the greatest achievement was learning to be my own person and find friends that accepted me for me and not because of how popular I happened to be or what I could give to them.

Did you do poorly at anything? Honestly, not to be conceited but I would have to say no. Everything that I encounter, whether an obstacle or a blessing I take with the greatest care and make work for my advantage because life is unpredictable and you have to do your best with what you're given.

Did you have any problems as a teenager (e.g., health, acne, social, educational, etc.)? I don't believe so. I would say the only problem that I faced was finding true friends at first, but socially I always had friends, just more superficial friends than those true to heart friends that I'll keep in touch with for the rest of our lives.

What do you hope to achieve by volunteering in an egg donor program? (e.g., emotionally, financially): A large underlying motivation is the financial compensation that will help me achieve my dream of becoming a police officer, so the money will be put towards schooling and things that will further my education. However, the most dominate reason for my donation is to help whatever family chooses me make the family they've dreamt of. There is no joy like that of having a child, or so I hear. I just know that there are families that deserve children that can't physically produce one of their own and I would love nothing more than to help them with what I may have that they may not for one reason or another.

What message would you like passed on to the recipient of your eggs/their offspring? That I hope this step in their life brings them all the joy in the world. My mother loves nothing more than her children and I hope that this newly formed family has all the great experiences I was able to have as a child. As long as there is love, there is a way to get through all obstacles.

What helped you decide to become an egg donor? A lot of thought and prayer led me to actually filling out this application, but Shantey, one of my best friends, is a donor and just her sheer joy when she found out that her eggs had been successfully transplanted and that there was a possibility that she had just helped a family make a new life. Her joy was a feeling that I only hope I can bring to someone as well.

Do you consider yourself a reliable person? Definitely.

Do you consider yourself a punctual person? 99.9% of the time yes, there are always those days of silly traffic that interfere with plans though.

Would you describe yourself as a religious or spiritual person? More spiritual than religious. Religious seems to hold a negative connotation, and while I have my beliefs I don't necessarily follow a religion to the 'T.'

Do you have any ethical, moral or religious reservations about being an egg donor? None whatsoever. I have thought long and hard and prayed about this process and believe my God gave me the ability to do this and to help another person in need.

What are your personal goals? Have you achieved any of these goals? Aside from career goals that I am on my way to achieve, my greatest ambition is to be the best person I can be. This person is a great friend, eventually a dedicated wife, maybe a mother at some point, and the sister and daughter I have always been.

What do you see yourself doing in the next 5-10 years? Hopefully working on an inner city police department as either a K-9 unit officer or as a detective. We'll see where that all leads, but I also hope t be married by that time.

What would you like your recipient couple to know about you that has not already been asked? That I wish them all the best in this journey and any others that come their way.

What is your favorite color? Purple

Favorite type of food? Mexican or Italian

Favorite movie? V for Vendetta, Save the Last Dance, Crash

Favorite type of music? ALL! I love music. I love oldies, hip-hop, soul, jazz, broadway punk, everything.

Favorite Book? The Things They Carried, Sula, The Grapes of Wrath, so many others.

Would you be willing to donate to gay or single prospective parents? Yes Please specify: Either one is fine. I know single parents and I know gay couples, both make great parents. I would have to say my only caution would be if a single parent didn't have a family system to help them because it can be so difficult to be completely alone.

Would you be willing to meet a child conceived as the result of your donation? Yes

Please elaborate: If it is the wish of the parents that I meet the child I would love to, I love children and would be so happy to meet the child that I was a small part in helping create.

Would you be interested in possibly meeting the prospective parents? Once again that would be completely up to the parents but I personally have no reservations about meeting them. I think if anything it would only make the process seem a little less scientific and a little more personal and hopefully give them a little more insight on the characteristics their child could inherit from me.

What are your beliefs concerning selective reduction or aborting a fetus due to an anomaly(s) (birth defect)?

I personally don't believe that is a choice that we, as humans, should be able to make. Every person is different and everyone deserves love regardless of defect. If every person that had a defect were aborted we wouldn't have near the population we have, nor would those that are just a little different be given the chance at life.

How do you feel about the possibility of any remaining embryos being donated to another infertile couple that cannot afford the cost of infertility treatment? Will you sign a consent permitting such donation?

If the couple that paid for the embryos don't want them then I have no say over what happens to them, however I think that would be great. As I said before everyone deserves a chance to have a baby if that's what they want and every child deserves love, so if the family wants a child and has the love but not the substantial amount of money needed who am I to deny them happiness.

How do you feel about any remaining embryos being discarded or donated to scientific research? Will you sign a consent permitting such medical or scientific research?

I would prefer they not be discarded because they are something that can be frozen and kept for another infertile couple that cannot afford the cost of infertility treatment or that can be given to science to make progressions in technology one way or another.

Some clinics have their Prospective Parents sign away rights to any left over embryos to be used at the clinic's discretion, how do you feel about not knowing the outcome of their decision?

I would rather know but either way I gave them away so it doesn't really matter that much either way.

What are your thoughts on the possibility of this couple using a gestational carrier (surrogate) or a qualified sperm donor?

Whatever is going to work best for the couple is what I think is best. While I believe, from what I've heard, there is nothing quite like birthing your own child there are some circumstances that this is not possible, so whatever makes this baby possible is best.

Is there a message you would like to leave for your prospective parents?

Good luck and I wish you and your new addition to the family the best of years to come. If there is ever any questions you have concerning me or my history I'm an open book because it is a very delicate situation you will have in the years to come only having these pages of my medical and social history. Congratulations on making it this far and I'm sure the years to come will prove to have many adventures and learning experiences in store.
